Very significant majorities see their community in a positive light on several dimensions.

My community is changing for the better

The area where I live has a strong sense of community

Residents have shared goals/priorities for our community

My community provides opportunities for everyone

While majorities believe their community is more united than divided, few strongly hold this view.

Do you think people in your community are more united or more divided when it comes to addressing important goals and challenges?

■ Community is MUCH more united ■ Community is somewhat more united ■ Community is more divided

Racial/ethnic minorities and non-college-graduate attendees are less likely than others to see their community as united.

Do you think people in your community are more united or more divided when it comes to addressing important goals and challenges?

Nonprofits and community organizations and residents are seen as the entities having the greatest impact.

TWO or THREE groups having greatest impact on making my community a better place to live:

Republicans and racial/ethnic minority attendees are more likely to see faith communities as having significant impact.

Attendees describe themselves as quite involved in their community, and the vast majority believe they can have an impact on improving their community.

Involvement in my community and neighborhood activities:

Impact people like me can have in making my community a better place:

Shoring up their community for future generations and excitement about the future are top motivators of community engagement.

TWO most motivating reasons for me to be involved/engaged in my community:

Want my community to be strong for our youth/future generations

Youth as their motivation:
All non-white attendees 59%
Afr-Amer. attendees 62%

Excited about potential for community's future, want to be part of shaping it

Specific issues and causes interest me and motivate me to get involved

Concerned about direction community is heading, want to be part of working to address those concerns

Believe it is my moral responsibility

In their own words: issues related to education and youth are the most frequently cited areas of involvement.

2018 RESULTS

Blue Grass Community Foundation is one of 10 community foundations across the U.S. participating in On The Table, a national initiative funded by the John S. and James L. Knight Foundation following a successful pilot in 2017. Through a survey of On The Table participants conducted by national public opinion research firms Hart Research Associates and Public Opinion Strategies, we gained a deeper understanding of the conversations. A summary presentation of findings from the survey, along with a data exploration tool that allows the results to be sorted based on specific topics and demographics, is available below.

In politics, are you a...?

County

Where do you regularly turn for news and information about your community?

Did you participate in On the Table last year?

Key Takeaways

- On the Table attendees who took the survey are engaged in the community, believe they can make a change, and are focused primarily on generational change that shapes the future of the community for the youth of today and tomorrow.
- Broadly, attendees who responded to the survey feel hopeful and united. But, there is less positivity about the community among lower-income, less educated, and racial and ethnic minority participants.
- Among these engaged adults, nonprofits and community residents are seen as the most impactful partners for community progress. Opinions vary by political affiliation and race and ethnicity.
- Public schools, housing, and jobs/economic security are among the top issues attendees want addressed in their community. Race relations are most important among racial and ethnic minority participants.
- Attendees see voting as a tangible and accessible way to effect change in their community, but that is just one of a long list of potential actions.
- On the Table events are places for participants to engage with new people, learn more about their community, and be inspired to action.
- Nearly all attendees surveyed say they will return next year.
