

Lexington Police Foundation Canine Unit Equipment Donation

The Lexington Police Department's Canine Unit is one of the most historical canine units in the commonwealth. Established in 1962, it was the first canine unit established in Kentucky, and was comprised of two dogs that worked at night. Today, the Lexington Police Canine Unit has grown to 13 police canines and handlers. As of last year, the unit responded to nearly 1,000 callouts for service, making it the most utilized operational support unit in the agency. With the growth of the program, and the mission to provide the officers and citizens of Lexington with the most advanced, professional canine support services possible, it is important to have the appropriate equipment on hand to support the continued training and education that makes these services possible. With the current financial forecast and limited available funds to budget towards the upkeep of such a large canine program, it is important to acquire assistance from support entities throughout the community, such as the Lexington Police Foundation.

The items listed below are much needed items that will assist our handlers and trainers with continued training and operations that will enable our unit to continue providing our community with essential support services.
