Vice Mayor Kay asked Ms. Evans to join him at the podium, along with several students from Frederick Douglass High School. Ms. Evans introduced the students and described their presentation to the Fayette County Equity Council on helping others through the grieving process when someone close to them dies, particularly when that person dies by violence. The students have applied their creativity and compassion to devise strategies to help others through loss.

Ms. Susan McClaughlin, a teacher at Lafayette High School, talked about the students and their work in her class.

Several students spoke about how experiencing a loss in their own lives helped them see a need for this program.

Vice Mayor Kay thanked the students for their work on this difficult matter, and read a Proclamation declaring October 26, 2017 as a day dedicated to each student in Lexington.

*

Vice Mayor Kay asked Mr. Farmer to join him at the podium, along with a delegation from County Kildare, Ireland, including Mayor Martin Miley. Mr. Farmer celebrated Lexington's long sister city relationship with County Kildare and expressed his happiness to host the delegation in Lexington this week. Mayor Miley introduced various members of his delegation, and he talked about his great interest in comparing and contrasting life in County Kildare to life in Lexington. Mayor Miley thanked the Council and City for the welcoming that he and the County Kildare delegation have received.

Mayor Miley expressed his appreciation for the earlier presentation by the students.

Mr. Farmer introduced the members of the County Kildare delegation.
