Dear Mr. McDaniel:

Thank you for the opportunity to provide strategic consulting services to the Downtown Lexington Corporation ("Client" or "DLP") related to the analysis of downtown development initiatives and governance ("Project"). Commonwealth Economics Partners, LLC ("Commonwealth Economics" or "CE") is a leader in providing economic consulting and quantitative services to state and local governments, quasi-governmental agencies, higher education, and private developers.

Commonwealth Economics routinely develops economic impact studies, market analyses, fiscal assessments, and feasibility studies for our clients. Additionally, Commonwealth Economics has helped clients successfully obtain over $2.5 billion in federal, state, and local incentives. CE frequently advises cities, counties, and private developers, with particular focus on evaluating the feasibility and structure of development initiatives. We have been engaged to provide analysis and ongoing project work in Lexington, Louisville, Owensboro, Fort Mitchell, Ashland, Newport, Somerset, Paducah, and other cities across the Commonwealth. CE was founded in 2007 and has advised over 150 clients.

I. PLAN OF ACTION

Commonwealth Economics agrees to work with DLP and the Lexington-Fayette Urban County Government ("LFUCG") to complete a comprehensive analysis of development initiatives and related governance specific to Downtown Lexington, carried out in the following recommended phases:

Phase One: Project Initiation

- Kickoff meeting with DLP and LFUCG officials to establish goals, schedule, deliverables, and lines of communication.
- Review zoning codes, incentive programs, land-use plans, and relevant city data.

- Identify key sites and corridors in Lexington's downtown to serve as representative case studies for evaluating policy and governance approaches.

Phase Two: Governance & Policy Research

- Conduct interviews with local developers, construction firms, landowners, and government officials to identify key barriers and opportunities to downtown development, investment, and beautification
- Study peer cities' downtown development and revitalization programs, with particular focus on:
 - Public-private coordination models (e.g., Downtown Development Liaisons, Economic Development entities, etc.)
 - Regulatory streamlining (e.g., expedited permitting, zoning overlays)
 - Downtown-specific incentive programs (e.g., grants, revolving loan funds, tax incentives, etc.)
 - Pro-development tax policy and land-use reform
- Interview peer city officials for additional insights.
- Assess Lexington-specific downtown development constraints such as parking minimums, zoning barriers, permitting delays, and historic preservation rules.

Phase Three: Distill Research

- Synthesize lessons from peer cities.
- Identify organizational structures (e.g., advisory boards, inter-agency teams) to enhance downtown development, including estimated staffing, experience, and salaries based on similar roles in peer cities.
- Build case studies on other U.S. cities with comparable downtown contexts, including:
 - Successful revitalization efforts and the policies that drove them
 - Unsuccessful efforts, with analysis of where they went wrong
- Host a mid-project stakeholder workshop to validate findings and ensure alignment.

Phase Four: Governance Strategy & Focus Areas

- Outline potential leadership role(s) and relation to Lexington's city agencies, local business groups, property owners, and community organizations in a unified downtown strategy.
- Develop strategies to ensure long-term coordination and implementation, including staffing, reporting structures, and communication.
- Identify key areas of focus, including:
 - Organizational models for downtown management
 - Non-financial incentives and programmatic support
 - Partnerships with local institutions (e.g., universities, major employers)
 - Business attraction and office revitalization
 - Downtown development promotion and coordination, including that of both affordable and workforce housing
 - Zoning and regulatory considerations
 - Provide suggestions for implementation, administrative review, and expected outcome analysis.
- Recommend engagement and accountability tools such as public dashboards, feedback mechanisms, and cross-sector working groups.

Phase Five: Final Report and Presentation

- Deliver a comprehensive final report detailing the findings, case studies, and implementation considerations for Lexington's downtown, including a clear recommendation as to the need for additional organizational support and suggestions for implementation.
- Facilitate a stakeholder presentation to review findings, answer questions, and gather feedback for refinement and implementation planning.

II. FEES AND COMPENSATION
